

Callen-Lorde Internal Medicine Residency Block Diagram

The Callen-Lorde Internal Medicine Residency program rotational curriculum is structured as a 4+2 model encompassing four weeks of non-ambulatory experiences (divided into 2 two-week blocks) followed two weeks of ambulatory experiences on repeat to best align with the mission of the Teaching Health Center programs and to align with the New York University internal medicine residency schedule, which is our training partner. During the four-week periods, residents complete inpatient and specialty rotations or have vacation (all of which add up to four weeks) and do not attend their continuity clinics. During the plus two weeks, during the PGY1 year, the residents attend their continuity clinics for six half-days, two half-days of specialty experiences, one half day of didactics held at the Callen-Lorde Brooklyn site, and one session of protected time for scholarly activity. One of the continuity sessions per week will be dedicated to panel management and one continuity session per ambulatory block will be dedicated to telemedicine visits.
